Bebe Daniels To Ralph Edwards: 'Who? Me?'

as we see it

Unless the networks intend to take out charters as charitable, nonprofit organizations (a highly unlikely development), the Notre Dame-Southern Methodist game on Dec. 4 probably will be the last college football contest telecast under the present NCAA restrictions. Hooray.

NCAA is the short, polite label applied to the National Collegiate Athletic Association, an outfit set up to handle intercollegiate track meets, basketball eliminations and such, but which somehow got its sticky paws into televised football. To make a sad long story a sad short one, the NCAA brains decided that unlimited telecasts would ruin gate receipts. They therefore set up a restricted schedule providing for national telecasts of one game each week, and offered their package to the networks on a highest-bidder basis.

The networks bid, and for three years NBC won. This year ABC grabbed the turkey with a $2,500,000 offer (NBC's high bid last year was $1,750,000), and it's no secret that ABC is taking a beating on the games.

Meanwhile, the Nation's viewers have been watching games that are sometimes good, sometimes bad, and more often than not—who cares? The entire country has been offered games that are chiefly of sectional interest.

Pro football has been going great guns with its highly popular regional telecasts and steadily rising gate receipts. College football is on the downgrade from a TV and gate standpoint. So there is every reason to hope that next year even NCAA will see the light and permit regional telecasts of college games. Otherwise, there may be no bids from the networks.

The Story Behind

'This Is Your Life... Bebe Daniels'

When, on the night of Sept. 29, Ralph Edwards said, "This is your life, Bebe Daniels," he touched off one of the biggest sighs of relief since Uncle Miltie swore off feminine finery.

The sigh, a collective one, was heaved by the entire This Is Your Life staff. For, since Aug. 1, Bebe Daniels had been staying with Louella Parsons, gossip columnist by trade, and all that time Miss Parsons had known about This Is Your Life's designs. This fact automatically wins Edwards a Potted Palm. Any man who can persuade Louella Parsons to hold out on her readers for 60 days is a man to be reckoned with.

Actually, the major headaches involved in getting Miss Daniels in front of the cameras

'Lifer' and MC: Bebe Daniels, Ralph Edwards.

Life-makers, from l., were staffer Alice Keyser, producer Axel Gruenberg, Mrs. Preston Scott, Barbara Lyon, Edwards, Mother Daniels, Richard Lyon, Edward Pinto.

She had to tell...

Jan Boehme: she digs up friends of the 'subject,' swears them to secrecy.

...But they kept mum

belonged to Jan Boehme, an Edwards staffer who spends half her time getting people on the phone and much of the other half explaining that her name is spelled B-O-E-H-M-E and rhymes with "came."

Jan is one of three researchers whose job it is to learn even small-print facts about the show's "subjects." (The surprise star, whether a celebrity or an unknown, is always referred to, pre-show, as "the principal subject" or, more intimately, "the subject.")

Jan's first phone call in connection with the Daniels show was made on Aug. 1. It was made to Miss Parsons, who confirmed the report that former screen star Bebe and her former screen star husband, Ben Lyon, had indeed arrived from their London home and were indeed staying with her. Louella, long one of Bebe's closest friends, was enthusiastic. "See Ben," she told Jan. "He knows everything."

Jan did, thereby precipitating a comedy of errors and misunderstandings which didn't get cleared up until Sept. 29.

Ben invited Jan to talk things over at lunch. What he hadn't counted on was the fact that many of his Hollywood friends would be at the same restaurant; that all of them knew Bebe; that none of them knew Jan; and that, by the nature of things, embarrassing questions couldn't be answered. On three different occasions, the gallant Mr. Lyon introduced Miss Boehme, mumbled, "I'll explain later," and let it go at that.

Jan contributed her own share of confusion by calling Ben several times and getting Bebe on the phone. When a wife hears a strange young female voice making a persistent point of speaking to her husband and then saying, "I prefer not to leave a message. I'll call back later," she's apt to get suspicious. Jan, a wife in her own right, felt like a heel.

After talking with Ben and reading a recently published autobiography of the Lyons, Jan conferred with Edwards and producer Alex Gruenberg. Then she headed for her sound-proofed cubicle in the Edwards offices just off Hollywood Boulevard and telephoned Hal Roach, Harold Lloyd and Cecil B. DeMille, who had played prominent roles in Bebe's movie career. DeMille was to be out of the country at the time and arranged to film his part. There were also calls to Mrs. Phyllis Daniels, Bebe's mother.

To tie into the show Bebe's wartime activities in London, Edwards decided to import two Britons. Edward Pinto, badly wounded in the blitz, had been brought to Bebe's house for first aid. Mrs. Preston B. Scott lost two sons in the war; their voices had been recorded by Bebe shortly before they died. It was Jan's job to track these people down by phone and persuade them to accept all-expenses-paid holidays in Hollywood.

Making arrangements with Pinto was easy. But Mrs. Scott, a widow, had remarried. Mrs. Scott also had moved to the United States. Just 10 days before show time, Jan discovered she was on a motor trip through the Northwest. She telephoned the state police of Washington, Oregon, California, Wyoming and Arizona, asking them, please, to keep an eye out for a blue sedan with Ohio plates. Four nervous days later, Jan traced her prey to Texas, where Mrs. Scott had dropped in to see her brother-in-law.

What should have been Jan's easiest job proved almost a nightmare. The Lyons' daughter and son, Barbara and Richard, were flown in from London. However, a last-minute switch in plane schedules was required and the airline, knowing nothing about This Is Your Life, called Mrs. Lyon. Luckily, Dorothy Manners, Louella's assistant, happened to answer, and the secret—and the show—were safe.

One last stumbling block remained—getting an unsuspicious Bebe to El Capitan Theater.

Sue Clark, Edwards' press agent, solved the problem by sending Louella a telegram inviting her to attend the first show of the season. Louella made a point of opening it in Bebe's presence and then calling Sue to ask if she couldn't bring her house guests.

Bebe fell for it. When Edwards turned the spotlight on her that night, she was one of the most surprised principal subjects the show has ever had. Jan Boehme, however, wasn't watching. She was on her phone again, talking to one of the key people involved in the Nov. 24 show. Mr. Bell's heirs should write this girl a thank-you note.

One Stuffed Moose Coming Up...

Network warehouses are chock-full of props like these for use on TV shows.

These lovely models did not come out of any TV storage place. But the balustrade and pre-Dior costumes did.

PROPS FROM ABACUS TO ZITHER CRAM TV'S HUGE RUMMAGE PILES

If you took the stuff lying around in attics from coast to coast and laid it end to end—well, you'd have about what you find in the cavernous warehouses which provide sets and props for television.

You name it and they've got it—at least, most of the time.

Consider the CBS prop and set warehouse which occupies most of the street and basement levels of the network's block-square studio building on Manhattan's West Side. There, 23,000 square feet are crammed to the ceiling with ashtrays, books, wolf skins, mannequins, barber chairs, broken airplane propellers, toys and almost anything that conceivably would be used—and a lot of stuff that won't. About 100 big vans each week truck the material out to the various CBS studios, and back again.

The warehouse was created as a service organization for CBS shows, according to Anthony Boschetti, manager of the department. It employs interior decorators who are necessarily trained to furnish not only a modern dwelling but also a medieval castle, a caveman's abode or even a futuristic home on another planet. The decorators get show scripts early and sit in on the planning.

Space limitations prevent the network from stocking all possible items, Boschetti says. So his department concentrates on most-needed pieces that can be used and re-used. Thanks to clever decorating techniques, a simple staircase can serve in a Victorian house and then, refurbished, become part of a modern home.

"We keep the items as long as they look good on camera," Boschetti says. "Then we either refurbish or replace them. The pieces take quite a beating in handling because both time and labor costs prohibit us from treating them gently." CBS has tried occasionally to sell some discards. "Most often, though, we find that we have to pay a trucker to cart them away."

While the various sponsors of CBS programs are not required to rent sets and props from the network's warehouse, they invariably do so. The sponsor is charged about 10 percent of the value of each piece needed for a show, which covers rent, labor, trucking and maintenance costs.

In shopping at galleries and antique shops, and occasionally buying an entire estate, CBS decorators have found some real bargains. Boschetti recalls buying a job lot of oil paintings at an average cost of $20 each. It included some individual works worth five and 10 times that amount.

The most expensive item ever used for a set decoration on a CBS show was a desk-secretary that originally belonged to France's famed Madame de Pompadour. CBS rented this one at a token fee from a New York gallery. Oh, yes, it was insured—for $29,000!

'Honest, She's My Wife!'

Shortly before Danny Thomas and Jean Hagen began making room for Daddy on ABC, the story goes that the two stars were discussing a TV script over a cup of coffee.

"Has it occurred to you," Danny asked Jean, "that a lot of people are going to think you and I are really married?"

"Just because we play a husband and wife on TV?" said Jean—a remark now famous on the set of Make Room for Daddy. "I don't believe it!"

A couple of weeks after the show went on the air, a sadder but wiser Jean Hagen reported sadly but wisely: "You're right, Danny. It does happen. I was at Ciro's last night and this dame came up and jumped all over me for two-timing my husband."

"Aha!" said Danny, "Who were you with at Ciro's?"

"My husband," said Jean. "She thought I was married to you."

It not only happens; it seems to be par for the course of true love on TV. A long and popular tradition of husband-and-wife teams who actuually are husband and wife is catching up with a lot of TV couples who aren't.

The widespread impression that he is Fred Mertz, the character he plays on I Love Lucy, is a minor plague in the life of William Frawley. It would be a major plague except that Frawley is beginning to share the same suspicion himself. So many strangers have hailed him as Fred Mertz that he is inclined to go along with the gag—at least until they start asking him where his wife, Ethel, is.

BUT MOST TV VIEWERS ARE STILL BAFFLED

Then Frawley, a gruff, hearty bachelor, is likely to snort: "Ethel! That hag! I wouldn't take her to a snake dance. She's home doing the laundry."

As for Vivian Vance, the other half of the celebrated Mertz couple, she has a stock answer for people who scrutinize her husband, actor Phil Ober, and demand: "But aren't you Mrs. Mertz?"

"Only on the show, thank goodness," Vivian snorts.

Even performers' own families are sometimes confused by TV characterizations. When Vivian was visiting her father, R. A. Jones, in Albuquerque, he wanted to know why she didn't use her own name on TV.

"That Fred Mertz you're supposed to be married to," R. A. said. "He uses his real name, doesn't he?"

Marjorie Reynolds, who plays William Bendix's wife in The Life of Riley, says strangers who address her as "Mrs. Bendix" always correct themselves and say "Mrs. Riley" when she shakes her head; but it doesn't happen often enough to undermine her marriage to John Haffen, a film cutter.

Trouble of this sort also dogs the steps of Jim Backus and Joan Davis of I Married Joan. Their devotion to each other on the TV screen apparently is so touching that the public is unable to divorce them from the characters they play on Wednesdays.

Ethel and Fred Mertz—Oops! we mean Vivian Vance and William Frawley.

Once, on a personal appearance tour to New York, Backus and Davis traveled together, arrived together at the hotel and registered at the same time, which was perfectly normal in the eyes of the desk clerk. But when Joan asked for a room on a separate floor, the clerk's mouth flew open.

"Well, what are you staring at?" demanded Joan, straight-faced. "He snores, that's all."

Backus complains that headwaiters tend to Siberia-ize him when he takes his wife, Henny, to dinner. They wind up behind a potted palm or at a table with half a view, shielded by the cigar stand. As an old student of waiters, Backus figures they figure he is stepping out on Joan Davis and don't want her walking in, armed, during the floor show.

This is not only hard on Backus, who likes to see floor shows, but also on Henny, who likes to regard her husband as her own exclusive property except when he is in pursuit of the family bacon on NBC. She has been known to let it discourage her to the point where she answers the telephone: "Hello. Jim's other wife speaking."

LADY OF FORTUNE

JAYE P. MORGAN BANKS ON HER VOICE

The resident songstress on Stop the Music every Tuesday evening and on The Robert Q. Lewis Show every afternoon, Miss Jaye P. Morgan, has a simple, never-fail formula for How-To-Get-Ahead-on-TV-If-You're-a-Girl. It is: Direct your appeal to the girls.

"Women control men and their viewing habits," Jaye believes. "They're the ones who control the dials. So if a woman says, 'I like that girl; she reminds me of my daughter,' you couldn't be in more solidly." On the other hand, says Jaye, when men say, "Wow!" better look out! "The gals will react with, 'Oh, she isn't so great. Her dress is kind of cheap.'"

On Jaye, such theorizing looks good, and not at all like sour grapes. That's because she's 23, blonde, slender and pretty.

Despite her name, which conjures up bank notes, rather than the musical kind, Jaye had a most modest start in life—a Colorado log cabin. Born Mary Morgan, the second youngest in a family of seven, and in the midst of the Depression, her first taste of show business came when her family moved back to their home state of California. "My father was a musician and singer, and we worked our way West. I sang in a Phoenix, Ariz., club with the rest of my brothers and sisters. I think I was three."

Like Jaye, the other six Morgans have been singing and dancing and making music ever since.

At Verdugo Hills high school, Miss Morgan was elected class treasurer and immediately dubbed "J.P.," a la the famous financier. "I thought people would remember it, so I became Jaye P.," she says.

While at school, she sang over a local radio station during the winter; summers, she sang and toured with her family. At 17, a show business veteran, she made her TV debut. Then, last November, she came East and auditioned for Robert Q.

Holding down two TV jobs and making records for RCA Victor, Jaye nonetheless found time recently to go off quietly and marry actor Michael Baiano. "I plan on having a large family," she explains, "and figured I might as well start young."

Chicago Dateline

TV's Week: Edward R. Murrow's See It Now has been renewed, ending speculation about his sponsor's reaction to his set-to with Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy.

The Telemeter pay-as-you-see TV system has suspended operations in Palm Springs, Cal., reportedly because of lack of first-run feature films.

Goodson and Todman, the quiz show kings, initiate a new program with Person to Person overtones on ABC-TV Sunday, Nov. 28. Tagged What Goes On?, it will ask four panelists to guess what two others are doing at various points along the East Coast.

A soap company is slated for alternate-week sponsorship of I Love Lucy, Topper and My Favorite Husband.

That's My Boy folds Jan 1.

Honestly, Celeste! is undergoing a complete overhaul. Cast, writing and production are to change.

Channel Chatter: This is the week, and Thursday is the day. TV GUIDE's Thanksgiving Day Party will be beamed over WGN-TV (Channel 9) from 3 to 4 P.M., Nov. 25. It should be a must on every young viewer's holiday menu. Featured will be the combined talents of seven TV children's favorites.

One-time "bad boy" of television Hal Block is again active in Chicago—but off camera. He's producing TV commercials at a local studio. Since Hal's heavy-handed flop with his own local comedy show, his dimpled face has been missing from the TV screens.

Pity the poor anonymous fellow (a midget) who cavorts as Scrubby the talking pig on Claude Kirchner's Scrub Club. He has to swelter through the show in a rubberized mask. And shades of Satan, it's heated in advance to give it a more pliant, lifelike look.

Kolb

If any producers are looking for a girl for Annie Oakley roles, they might well consider pert TV comedienne Mina Kolb. Little Mina, who does those clever song pantomimes with Ray Rayner, is an avid pheasant hunter—and a good shot.

Mary Hartline: QUEEN OF CHICAGO'S "NAVY"

Super Circus Star Ends Yachting Season, Prepares For TV GUIDE's Thanksgiving Party, Thursday, Channel 9, 3-4 P.M.

The first wintry gusts that send the birds flying South also send Lake Michigan's fresh-water sailors scurrying to get their boats into drydock. Among the nautical crowd that brought craft up the Chicago River last month were Super Circus star Mary Hartline and her husband, attorney George Bernard.

Mary, long a reigning queen over many a young viewer's heart, will be seen on TV GUIDE's big Thanksgiving Day TV Party telecast this Thursday, Nov. 25, over Channel 9 from 3 to 4 P.M. She will emcee an all-star fun show featuring popular Windy City TV children's favorites.

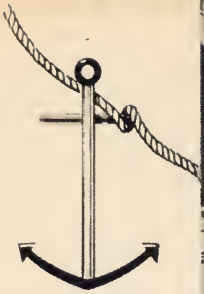
In summer, when not performing or rehearsing, the Super Circus beauty can most often be found aboard her boat. She and hubby George own a beautiful, 53-foot, 27-ton Diesel yacht, called (aptly enough, considering its attractive lines) the "Mary Hartline." The luxury craft was built last winter and was launched in May. It sleeps 10, is completely rigged with all safety devices, including a ship-to-shore radio, and is painted a brilliant white.

The boat also features the utmost in comfort: a cozy galley, a refrigerator, a shower and plush cabins. Mary and George use it widely for entertaining and have had such celebrities as Governor Stratton aboard.

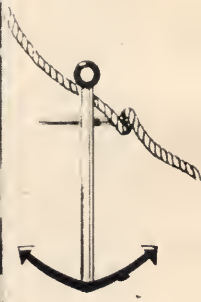
The end-of-season storage of the boat is a sad occasion. Mary and George were so sentimental about it that they took the ship's clock back home, feeling that its chimes would remind them all winter of happy summer voyages.

Herewith TV GUIDE tells in pictures the whole story of how the "Mary Hartline" was docked and made snug for the winter.

Mary and George stand on the bridge as their boat cruises its way up the south branch of the Chicago River.



Manpower, and a derrick capable of lifting 70 tons, hauls the "Mary Hartline" right out of the river.



Stern-end view of the sleek craft. Later, it was fitted into a cradle for a sleep which will last until May.

◀ Mary in befurred togs (it was c-o-old out there!) scrubs the sides of her craft. In the spring the boat will be repainted.

Final step: a cover-up ▶ job with a canvas tarpaulin. Pipe-smoking George seems content to have Mary do the hard work.

Cuffnote: The Chicago White Sox and the Cubs have already signed contracts with WGN-TV to televise all daytime home games next year. And it won't come as the faintest surprise that Jack Brickhouse will again return as commentator, assisted by Jack Rosenberg. Harry Creighton, who'll be back as the commercial announcer, may have to drop his old routine showing him happily guzzling the sponsor's beer. The Michigan Association of Radio & TV Broadcasters is taking steps to ban commercials that feature beer or wine drinking.

Ring Views: Frank Schreiber, Channel 9 General Manager, has voiced his approval of lady wrestling. If Illinois approves of lady grapplers and grants licenses to promote such exhibitions, WGN-TV may televise them—if the gals remember they're ladies!

Personal To Joe Wilson: We think you're doing great, Joe as the Championship Bowling commentator. But do you really think the viewers need all the talk you give them? Action still speaks louder than words. —And the crowd behind you. Couldn't they be instructed before the show not to wave or gesture at the camera? It's particularly annoying when you're trying to concentrate on a bowler.

Wilson

Anyway, we'd like to congratulate you on the show's success in its new Saturday night time slot. Recent ARB ratings prove the show is drawing the biggest share of audience at that hour.

Terry-ific

Imagine my surprise when, without any advance publicity or fanfare, I happened to stumble on the finest locally-produced show in ages. I tuned in the show—Step Lightly—accidentally last Saturday night. Now I want to congratulate Channel 7 for selecting as emcee my favorite old "night owl," Ron Terry. He's a fine master of ceremonies, a man of charm and competence. He can do a fine job of singing, too. And he's one of the guys who can present a commercial painlessly. Chicago needs more shows like Step Lightly.—A. J. Anthony, Chicago.

Terry

Miscasting?

I've been disappointed in the last few They Stand Accused dramas. The pace seems overly fast and grim. And there's a warm, human something missing in the performance of the "judge," who seems to have taken over the show. I still think the "cases," the lawyers and the witnesses, however, are as fascinating as ever.—Laura O'Connell, Chicago. [Many viewers have written that they would like to see the former judge, Charles Ralph Johnston, return. We suggest you write to WGN-TV, 441 N. Michigan, Chicago 11, Ill.—ED.]

Chicago's Gift To Hollywood

I think the comedy show put on by former Chicago comic George Gobel is the best one on television. I hope he stays on for a long, long time. Good luck, George, keep it up!—A. O'Dowd, Chicago.

The Big Commute

BILL CULLEN'S JOBS KEEP HIM WINGING COAST TO COAST

A novel was written to explain "What Makes Sammy Run?" But no such elaborate outlay of vocabulary is required to answer a more recent query, "What Makes Billy Fly?" In this case, involving TV's gregarious, smiling, 34-year-old Bill Cullen, two words suffice: "Sheer necessity."

Unless you're a wisp of ectoplasm, it's impossible to waft yourself 3000 miles overnight any other way. Cullen's numerous jobs on the air compel him to take to the air. Though some people may think he's spreading himself perilously thin, Cullen's hoping that he'll always be going, going, going, but never gone.

As emcee of the Thursday night Name That Tune, Cullen tries—deliberately—to perplex the people by asking them to name tunes sung in Afghanistani, Icelandic or maybe Vietnamese.

◀ Often air-borne, Bill Cullen boards own off-duty plane.

Going, Going, Going . . .

The strange music still ringing in his ears, he shuttles to New York's LaGuardia airport, boards a transcontinental plane and zooms to Los Angeles to emcee another parlor game a la TV, Place the Face, on Saturday.

While there, he also emcees NBC-Radio's four-hour Saturday afternoon "Road Show," which was shifted to the West Coast just so Cullen could shoehorn it into his overstuffed agenda.

Monday morning he's back in New York and recording five-minute "It Happens Every Day" radio sessions with Arlene Francis. Two other radio shows—"Walk a Mile" and "Stop the Music"—also claim his time; yet, come Wednesday night, he somehow has enough reserve energy to cavort before the I've Got a Secret cameras.

To keep up this frantic schedule, sprightly but easy-going Cullen flew an estimated 192,000 miles last year. Just why someone else hasn't been tapped for some of his chores, to cut down on his mileage, would make a provocative I've Got a Secret secret. Bill himself smiles and says he's riding the tailwind of a good luck cloud.

One thing's sure: Bill knows a good-luck cloud when he sees one. He latched on to his present jackpot—"the quiz kick," he calls it—some time back. Then, three years ago, though he had tenanted University of Pittsburgh classrooms only briefly, he rented a cap and gown and put a half-hour quiz show, Professor Yes 'n' No, on film. It was sold to a number of local stations.

Since then he's gone on to bigger and better things on TV.

Normally a happy-go-lucky sort of fellow, Bill rarely worries. "If I somehow do get halfway serious, I always manage to find something to hinge a joke on and then I break up. I really base myself on fun."

For all this fun and frolic, Bill earned close to $150,000 last year. He won't say what his current earnings are, but you can be sure he didn't sign for that same trivial figure. "You have to keep pushing your price up," he says. "I want to make a lot of money. Why not? What else is there?"

An affable young man, Cullen started out modestly, with small hopes and small plans: to get a network job as an announcer. Looking back, he says, "I'm not a success by the yardstick of people who haven't been terribly lucky. I happened to walk into CBS in 1944, straight out of Pittsburgh, and they just happened to be auditioning that day for announcers. I only got the job because all the top guys were in the Army."

After four years at CBS Radio, Bill "fell into emceeing." He believes all quiz show emcees—Groucho Marx excepted—are announcers who just stumbled into the "quiz kick." "It put me into show business, but it didn't mean I had talent. All I have is the ability to carry on a conversation!"

Good emceeing, expert Cullen thinks, is the ability to make people seem interesting.

Cullen with I've Got a Secret chums Jayne Meadows, l., Laraine Day, Henry Morgan.

He believes everyone is on some kind of "kick." "CBS is on a back-to-the-people kick"; "the people are on a quiz kick." Cullen himself is on a "good-luck kick."

He has another theory. "Quiz shows are here to stay because the common man experiences a definite feeling of participation, even if only vicariously. The common man either thinks, 'I could have answered that question' or 'I could not have answered it.' But either way," he points out, "the common man participates."

Bill is all for the "common man," even approves that mythical individual's love of soap opera and quiz shows. The importance of understanding the common man was impressed on him promptly after he arrived in New York. "I was writing home about all the people—big names, too—that I kept meeting. But my mother wasn't impressed until she heard I met the heroine of 'Life Can Be Beautiful.'

"The critics are always knocking soap operas and quiz shows," he says. "Yet look how popular they are."

At 18 months, Bill developed polio and was left with a permanent limp. He wore a brace on one leg until he was 10. Afterwards, though he managed without a brace, he wasn't allowed to take part in high school sports. He says, "I did fine on the back lot with the boys. Maybe I ran a lot slower, but I hit the ball a lot harder."

In recent years, he's given up sandlot baseball for trapshooting. And his new commuting schedule didn't introduce him to planes. He's piloted planes since he was 17, now owns a four-seat Beachcraft Bonanza. For two years, starting in 1950, he owned Appointment Airlines—"lock, stock and debt." ("I was broke before I started and afterwards, but I was cured of the desire to own things.")

Convinced he's anything but the solid-citizen type, Bill and his wife, a former singer, are sold on Manhattan because "No one has any standing there."

Bill is also sold on luck. "What else could my success be?" he asks. "Accomplishment? What would that mean—bigger and better parlor games? Nope, it's pure luck. Look, I don't even make any preparations for TV. True, I do shave. But I do that anyway."

Fact . . . and Fiction, Too

NEW APPROACH FOR 'CAVALCADE' AS IT RIDES INTO THE PRESENT

Cavalcade of America, a show from which dignity and prestige drip in kingsize drops, is on the verge of a change of pace. While no one connected with the operation would say the show is switching from the historical to the hysterical, that is about what it amounts to. Cavalcade of America, in short, is about to depart the wonderful sanctity of circa 1776 and move boldly into 1954. In these times, this could be suicidal.

Sponsored for 17 years on radio by the Du Pont people, Cavalcade came to TV in 1952. It has been devoted, of course, to depicting events of American history, with a warmth and understanding so often lacking in the cold print of textbooks. It has dedicated itself to Americana, dealing in both fact and semifiction, and has finally reached the point where it seems wise to move on, at least occasionally, and lock horns with the immediate present.

"This, of course," says Jack DeNove, who is currently producing the bulk of the Cavalcade films, "means we must deal more in fiction than in fact. There is nothing tougher than trying to depict a person who is still alive—or even a person whose heirs are still alive. They can be worse, in fact."

For the first "modern" film, Cavalcade has chosen to memorialize the American doctor, genial practitioner variety. Titled, sensibly enough, "The Doctor," it is scheduled to be telecast on ABC Dec. 7. Dean Jagger, an Academy Award winner (for his adjutant's role in "Twelve O'Clock High"), makes his TV film bow in the episode.

Du Pont, with characteristic caution and a magnificent eye for detail, commandeered no less a personage than Dr. Dwight Murray, chairman of the board of trustees of the American Medical Association, to examine set and script for complete authenticity. The only thing the good doctor missed was the prop diploma on the office wall—a veterinarian's.

DeNove, despite the built-in headaches of any costume picture, would still rather do them dead than alive. "In this doctor film, for instance," he sighs, "we had a real simple little bit where the wife hums a snatch of melody from 'Oklahoma!' which reminds her husband that he's forgotten to go out and buy tickets to the show. We had so much trouble trying to get clearance on that one bit of music that we had to scrap the whole thing and change it to 'Carmen.' More cultural, anyway. Also in the public domain."

Future Cavalcades, to be dealt with strictly as fiction, will include a salute to the American newspaperman, the policeman, the football coach, the farmer, the public servant, the aviator (possibly based on Charles Lindbergh) and other subjects designed to tell the story of present-day America.

Most affected by the shift is one Richard Gaines, an actor. His specialty is playing George Washington, whom he resembles in face if not in fortune, and whom he has depicted in no less than six Cavalcades to date.

"When Cavalcade decides again that this country has a history," he says, a little forlornly, "I will be available."

The year is 1954: Dean Jagger as 'The Doctor' advises patient Nancy Hale in Cavalcade's first portrait of the present.

Father Knows Best

PROGRAM OF THE WEEK

All good things come to those who wait, it says here. Even in TV. After suffering through several seasons of watching so-called normal families caught up in inane situation comedies, patient viewers can now reap their reward.

It's the new Robert Young-Jane Wyatt show, Father Knows Best. In what must herald a first for TV, the Anderson family here portrayed is as normal and true-to-life as that family next door, and the situations that befall them could happen to anybody.

Naturally, Young and his king-size staff (11 writers contribute to the show) take dramatic license occasionally. The situations may be just a trifle exaggerated for more humor or

Willy

Poor June Havoc. After delaying her entrance into TV on a regular basis "until the right property came along," she finally took the plunge this season with a situation comedy titled Willy. But if this is the right property, she should have stuck to guest appearances. Willy is so far beneath her already proven talents as a comedienne and actress that it seems a shame to have the show inflicted on her—let alone on the audience.

As Willy, Miss Havoc plays a struggling young woman attorney in a small New England town. Her family are all characters straight out of "You Can't Take It with You." And the comedy dates appeal. But that is all to the good and makes for a far better show. And, wonder of wonders, Young himself is not the bumbling father who's always low man on the family totem pole, as in many TV comedies. He plays an alert, intelligent and responsible citizen with a sense of humor.

Like any father, he's often confused by the antics of his three children, but he's right there with the guiding touch when needed. The role is tailored to his talents. Miss Wyatt is fine as the young mother, who rules her charges with amused understanding. Elinor Donahue, as the elder daughter, could be anybody's teen-age sister. Billy Gray is a good little actor as the young son, and little Lauren Chapin, possibly because she gets the funniest lines each week, often threatens to walk away with the honors.

Best of all, the show is fun to watch. It's a good situation comedy in every sense of that term.

back almost that far. Each week finds Willy trying to win her first big case and running up against the usual small-town provincialism, or problems with her family or her fiance.

Miss Havoc does her best, sometimes rising above her material to produce a few laughs. Whitfield Connor, as her boy friend, the town veterinarian, never has a chance. Wheaton Chambers, as June's father; Mary Treen, as her widowed sister, and Danny Richards, Jr., as her nephew, all try hard. Richards, in fact, could be a real comedy find if some friendly TV producer would give him the right comedy.—R.S.

FINE TUNING

By Ollie Crawford

Television shows celebrate Thanksgiving. TV is where they celebrate if they haven't had a turkey.

Thanksgiving—this is the day when you can get the kids to eat in the dining room.

A guy can be thankful today if he just has a breathing space between the last payment on the old set and the first payment on the color set. Everybody is thankful about TV—if you're not thankful about the show, you're thankful because you can turn it off.

This is the season when the frost is on the pumpkin and the corn is in the script.

The first Thanksgiving was when a turkey named George Gobbler invented the phrase, "I'll be a dirty bird." The big Thanksgiving show that year had a lot of Indians, but no cowboys. They were thankful for their blessings just when the average modern guy would be trying to get on Strike It Rich.

The Pilgrim Fathers landed on Plymouth Rock, which was the first time any American had rocks in his tread.

At the first Thanksgiving, they had no TV set. So they invited the tepee set.

Corliss Archer and How She Grew...

FROM GLAMOR GIRL

Back goes clock: the real Ann Baker (top); as Corliss, with boy friend Bobby Ellis.

TO TEEN AGER

Recipe for youth: Ann's face gets that freshly scrubbed look, then up goes her hair in a pony-tail. Finally, she lolls on floor as 15 year-olds do while gabbing with their boy friends on the phone.

Some 10 years ago, F. Hugh Herbert wrote a play called "Kiss and Tell." In it was a teen-age snip of a female named Corliss Archer. She was first played on Broadway by a rank unknown named Joan Caulfield, who went on to become a Paramount star and today teams with Barry Nelson in TV's My Favorite Husband. Four years ago, Corliss appeared on TV for 20 weeks in a live CBS show headlining Lugene Sanders, a USC drama student who went on to become the teen-age daughter of a dense father in The Life of Riley. Now, in a full-fledged film series, Meet Corliss Archer, she's being played by Ann Baker, who's 22 and out of Sedalia, Mo. Glamorous enough to have been a successful model (her picture appeared on more than 50 magazine covers), Ann is shown transforming herself into teen-ager Archer. Keep an eye on Ann; Corliss is good to her portrayers.

WE ASKED THEM

Should Artists Shed Their Dignity on TV?

Ezio Pinza, opera, concert, stage and TV star: "No, if they can avoid it. Serious artists are probably not too good at such things. By trying to convince the public how 'regular' they are, they do not create a feeling of audience relaxation, but rather the apprehension that prevails when one sees an insecure tight-rope walker."

Lauritz Melchior, opera, concert and film star: "If loss of dignity means a pie in the face, no. It's been a long time since that was funny. If a situation has real humor, I don't see why the dignified person can't enjoy doing it on TV or any place else and still keep his dignity. A sense of humor never hurt an artist's reputation."

Jimmy Durante, star of The Jimmy Durante Show: "Sure, providing the stunts are in good taste. Margaret Truman clowned, did the shuffle and sang with me while her dad was still President. The public loved her. And Helen Traubel, a great opera star for years, revealed a new and profitable 'pop' personality on my show."

Martha Raye, star of The Martha Raye Show: "I think it's good for every star to let his hair down once in a while. It gives the public the feeling that the performer is also a great guy with a sense of humor. Being able to take a joke on one's self is a quality I believe all people admire. Besides, it's more fun not being a stuffed shirt!"

Milton Berle, star of The Milton Berle Show: "Dignified performers reveal their human qualities when they do offbeat stunts, such as throwing pies or squirting seltzer. It makes the star 'believable' to the audience, bringing a seemingly aloof person down to earth. Even 'artists,' I imagine, aren't opposed to popularity."

Sol Hurok, concert and ballet impresario: "Generally speaking, I should say no. But I will qualify that statement by saying that each artist must be handled as the individual he or she is. Show me the specific performer, and I'd be better able to say what he should or should not do in the way of television stunts."
